Your bib weighs almost nothing. Everything that went behind it does.

Somewhere along the way, you stopped negotiating with the 5 AM alarm. You showed up for the training runs nobody clapped for. The kilometer where stopping was easier, and you didn't. The year you came back to finish, after the year you didn't.

Nobody was watching. You did it anyway. That's the part that changed you.

All of that counts this Sunday, when 45,000 of us line up in the running capital of India, at a marathon ranked among the Top 50 in the world.

You promised yourself you'd do this. A promise got you to sign up. A promise may even get you to the start line. But no one has ever crossed a finish line on a promise. You have to run it.

That's what proof is. Proof that every alarm, every solo run, every sore leg was worth it. Proof that you're stronger, bolder, better than you thought you were.

Promises alone won't make progress. Proof makes you a finisher. Proof is why you run. Proof is why our clients trust us.

Make Sunday about proof. Because proof is everything.

proof over promise.
